Three Funerals at Once Yesterday.

Yesterday afternoon three funerals left the South Side for cemeteries east of the city so close together as to seem like one long procession. One had to wait at a cross street to avoid breaking in upon another. One was that of James Byrne, and another that of Mrs. Jordan, the mother-in-law of James Killeen, janitor of the city building.

A Steer's Wild Leap.

Saturday James Leach, the butcher, drove a steer into Fritz Luikert's slaughter house. The animal ran the wrong way, into a stable, and sprang from an open door, falling about twenty feet into the creek. Not at all hurt, it ran some distance, being finally headed off at Eis's, and started back toward Fulton. There it ran into a house, where it was secured with a rope.

A Wheeling Man Hurt.

A special dispatch from Springfield, O., to the Cincinnati Enquirer says: Will Riddle, of Wheeling, W. Va., employed in building a bridge for the Big Four, three miles west of this city, was injured this evening. He was standing on a board, when something gave way, and the board threw him fifteen feet in the air, and he struck the ground head first, fracturing his skull and breaking an arm and several ribs.

This Time It Didn't Go.

Saturday Mrs. Gooney, of the North End, was before Squire Peterman on a peace warrant sworn out by Mrs. Iona Wilson. A bond for her good behavior was required, but she took an appeal. T. M. Garvin represented the prosecution and S. O. Boyce the defense. In the course of the hearing some words passed between the attorneys, and Mr. Garvin quoted one of Mr. Howard's recent expressions in the criminal court, applying it to Mr. Boyce. Thereupon the latter intimated with some force that if his opponent did not apologize he would thump him or words to that effect. Mr. Garvin apologized.

A Wheeling Blind Man.

A blind man dressed in a shabby suit of clothes and wearing a straw hat with a brim of immense proportions, attracted considerable attention last evening on Federal street, Allegheny, says Saturday's Pittsburgh Commercial-Gazette. He was led by a small boy. At the police station the man explained that they were in search of his brother, Henry Frederick, who is supposed to be living on Reuben street. They came from Wheeling, where the parents of the man live, and said they had walked all the way, as the blind man was afraid to trust the boy around the cars. The man and boy were provided for until the brother can be found.

Wheeling Ladies at Old Orchard.

The Old Orchard Beach Seashell of a recent date says:

There was a flurry and a flutter in social circles at Old Orchard beach yesterday occasioned by the arrival of a distinguished party at the Sea Shore house, consisting of Mr. L. G. Hirsch and wife, of Portland, and the Misses Gutman, of Wheeling, West Va. The Misses Gutman are among the leaders of fashion in the pan handle city of West Virginia, and are leading factors in one of the great social organizations there known as the Mercantile Club. Full many a summer the Misses Gutman have created a stir in the watering places of New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Their pretty toilets and graceful dancing at the sea shore and Fiske caught many eyes last evening. The party was en route to the Glen House when that popular hostelry burned.

The Fishers in Camp.

So many visitors went to the various fishing camps yesterday that the patronage of both parks and other popular Sunday resorts was affected visibly. All the good camps have big Sunday dinners, and entertain many visitors.

None of the boys in camp have equaled the Powhatan story of a six-foot cod that almost drowned a man, but some of them do pretty well. John Tangle and Henry Yanko, of the South Side, came up the other day with a catfish that weighed 47 pounds, and Frank Hounie, of Seventh and Market streets, received from a member of the Lilly fishing club a catfish that weighed 104 pounds.

City Clerk Thoner returned from the Brunswick club's camp Saturday. He says the fish will not bite.

Most of the members of the Jack Bass club came home from their camp up the creek Saturday.

The Pelican Club.

One of the largest fish caught down the river was caught at the Pelican Rod and Gun Club camp by Henry Schenck. It was a salmon and measured two feet and ten inches. The boys are enjoying themselves and large crowds visit them every Sunday.

A GREAT IDEA.

An Old Time Stage Coach Drive from Wheeling to Columbus.

The following from the Cambridge, Ohio, Jeffersonian, will be read here with interest, and if the idea is carried out Wheeling will give the expedition a fitting send-off:

Previous to the completion of the national road the United States mail was carried between Wheeling and Zanesville on the old Wheeling road. This was in 1828 and 1827, and in 1828 the Ohio Stage Company was organized, with Capt. William D. Terry as its agent, and the mails and passengers were carried along the national road and all kinds of traffic was immense until the building of the Central Ohio railroad diverted it to that channel.

Capt. Terry, in 1855, took a part of the stock and equipments to Iowa and there established stage routes. The venerable captain is yet alive and resides in Zanesville, Ohio. He has a scheme in mind, that, if carried into effect, will be very interesting, that he recently unfolded to Capt. John G. Bell, of Cambridge.

He has written to George Hawkes, who now lives in southern Ohio, who was one of the original stage company, and who the captain supposes may yet have one of the old stages that can be repaired and put in order for an old time trip between Columbus and Wheeling. The old stage procured, he proposes to make up a party of old stage drivers and other pioneers, among whom are Capt. Bell and H. Bimple, of Zanesville, an old stage driver. They will hold receptions at the different original stopping places along the route and indulge in reminiscences.

The plan is to have the trip made about the date of the Pennycroyal reunion. All the old drivers will be invited to join in these receptions and a full report made of the stories told, incidents related, historical and traditional reminiscences brought out.

In this centennial year we can conceive of nothing more interesting than this proposed journey with this old time equipment, with the horn and hustling, coach approaching the "tavern" like a tornado. It would be greeted along the line with great enthusiasm.

IMPORTANT INVENTION

By Comedian Phil Greiner, of Value to Traveling Theatrical Companies—His New Play About Ready.

Among the new candidates for public favor in the coming theatrical season will be the play written by Phil S. Greiner, of "Peck's Bad Boy" fame. Its title is "Grandpa Squeers, or Christmas Eve on the Farm," with Mr. Greiner in the leading part. Critics who have read the manuscript have pronounced the comedy one of the strongest of the kind yet produced.

An interesting feature, which will prove an important innovation in the matter of theatrical mechanical appliances and which will produce a revolution in the use of scenery, will be the scenery invented by Mr. Greiner, which can be used on any stage, large or small, without spoiling the effect. It can be worked on a stage 10 by 10 feet or 50 by 50 feet, or any other size, and the effect will be the same. The scenery for the new play will comprise four scenes in the Mammoth cave, made from flash-light photographs, and therefore "true to nature." It will be the first time that a scenic production of the interior of the Mammoth cave has ever been put upon the stage, and will undoubtedly make a hit. Mr. Greiner's home is in Fairmont, this state, and it is there that he is arranging the details for the season.
